

Who We Are

Teaching Channel is a learning platform that empowers educators to be their very best in the classroom, while providing school leaders a comprehensive range of professional development solutions. We work closely with districts, charter networks, state education agencies, and higher ed schools of education to design custom solutions for their greatest learning and development needs.

What We Do

Whether teachers want to learn at their own pace or as a collaborative group, we have online continuing education and professional development courses suited for all schedules, grades, and topics. All our learning content and tools are designed to keep teachers engaged, empowered and inspired.

The Teaching Channel Professional Learning Model

It is research-based and includes five elements to ensure adult learners experience quality personal and professional development and carry new knowledge into their classrooms and to their students.

What We Offer

Teaching Channel offers 175+ ELEVATE online courses that are rigorous and align with the Quality Matters framework - and the Teaching Channel professional learning model. Courses are self-paced, and each 3-credit course carries the equivalent of 45 hours of content and coursework. The majority of courses are built around seminal texts that are a balance of research and applicability and written by major authors in the field of education. Our courses include high-quality tutorial videos, multi-media clips and research-based articles to supplement course texts.

Courses created by educators, for educators.

Courses are developed by educators that hold, at a minimum, a master's degree and have professional experience, or licensure in the content area specific to the course. Courses are reviewed annually and take into consideration participant feedback, new information available on the topic, insights from our university partners, and new opportunities to learn and show learning through implementation.

Course are approved through our regionally accredited institutions by review of the syllabi, content, and coursework expectations.

Each of our university partners has provided documentation to indicate that our courses are degree eligible. These memos indicate a certain number of credits from Teaching Channel that are noted as eligible toward the education master's degree at the partner university.

University Partners include:

ELEVATE continuing education courses are approved by our regionally accredited (HLC, NECHE, WSCUC, NWCCU) partners including Andrews University, Augustana University, Lourdes University, Pacific Lutheran University, Roosevelt University, Southern New Hampshire University, American College of Education, and our newest addition, Upper Iowa University.
